Prospects

The 1950-51 Tar Heels will be a better team than last year's combination. They have a greater variety of shots, more speed and greater depth in reserves. However, the old injury jinx that plagued the squad last season cropped up early in the campaign to give the squad a rude setback.

Hugo Kappler, a dynamic forward around whom the team is built, snapped a wrist bone in the third game and missed all the regular scheduled games until January. Bud Maddie, a sophomore who took over the questionable center position vacated by Sherman Nearman, was also crippled in that third contest, sustaining a shoulder separation.

If these two regulars return in good shape soon, the Tar Heels should be in the thick of contention for loop honors come February.

This current crew is the first Scott-coached team wholly drilled in and adapted to Scott's offense. With the exception of Dick Patterson, a junior college transfer, the entire squad matriculated under the Scott regime. And there is promising material on hand.

Filling in for Kappler has been Jack Wallace, a sophomore from Elkin, W. Va. Filling in for Maddie is another first year man, Ernie Schwarz. They are but two of several outstanding newcomers. Others of note are Vince Grimaldi and Bill Ellington at guards, Tom Gaines at forward and Jippy Carter at center.

Patterson will be a starter at forward with either mended Kappler or Wallace, while Grimaldi will play behind Charlie Thorne and Howard Deasy, two of the Conference's finest guards.

Returning veterans who will be first rate reserves are Hal Ferraro and Red Wells, senior forwards, and Bill White, a guard. Frank Redding returns for his junior year at the pivot post.

The Tar Heels benefited greatly from pre-season play with the professional Grand Rapids Hornets led by former Carolina great George Glamack.

A strong schedule, designed to get the squad ready for the Conference drive, has been arranged. Several early games resulted in good conditioning and wins. A trip to Pikeville, Ky., to play two powers in Xavier and Eastern Kentucky, along with the Dixie Classic play set them off in strong competition.

Following the Classic the Tar Heels journey North to meet New York University in Madison Square Garden and Temple in Philadelphia's Convention Hall. After that the annual dog fight for Southern Conference tournament berths and the league bunting.

Coach Scott points out that the record for the year may not be as good as last year's because of the increased strength of Big Four teams, but makes no bones about the fact that the Tar Heels will definitely be a better team.

His optimism was somewhat dimmed by the early injuries of regulars Kappler and Maddie, but he hopes they will be ready for the big drive in the stretch.

Coaches

Tom Scott

Clyde E. Mullis

TOM SCOTT (Head Coach): Tom Scott likes to play bridge, takes an occasional crack at square dancing, and in between these diversions coaches basketball. It's the latter "pastime" at which he has been most successful. The quiet Kansan arrived on the local horizon five years ago with an impressive record. Here he has added to his reputation as one of the nation's finest coaches.

His Carolina teams have won 104 games in 142 tries.

His prowess as a coach was well known when he arrived at the Hill. He started coaching in Kansas high schools, moved on to Concordia College in Minnesota, and then gravitated to Missouri State Teacher's College.

At Missouri State his teams copped four loop titles in five years. They lost only five conference games during those years, and his teams were selected to play in the National Intercollegiates. One of his clubs, the 1939 outfit, topped Kansas the year that team won the Western NCAA crown. The same Scott-coached crew won the famed Oklahoma City Tournament, beating such formidables as S.M.U., Texas, Tulsa, and Oklahoma A&M.

Following that stretch, Scott did a hitch of four years as a Naval officer.

The Carolina squads have been equally as successful. The 1947 Tar Heels went to the finals of the Conference tournament in Durham, bowing to powerful N. C. State, 50-48. The next two years saw the Tar Heels losing to the State team in the semi-finals. Every one of his teams have made the select loop tourney.

The 1948-49 team was honored by being chosen to play in the Camellia Bowl and brought that coveted trophy back to Chapel Hill after trimming Arizona.

Last year's Tar Heels were no less impressive. Slowed to a walk by injuries most of the season, the team played well in the Dixie Classic at Raleigh. There they topped Duke, lost a 58-50 game to West Virginia and dropped a thrilling overtime battle to Rhode Island State's aces.

Scott is a member of the National Basketball Coaches Association's committees on both publications and officials. Incidentally, two additional honors have come Scott's way recently. The Monogram Club's award to the outstanding coach on the campus went to him this year. The United Press Association has selected him, as one of the top basketball authorities in the Nation, to pick the top ten teams in the country each week.

CLYDE E. MULLIS (Assistant Coach): "Pete" is as widely known to the youngsters of our State as he is to the basketball followers. While many of the grownups remember him as a small, but flashy court artist here from 1934 to 1938, and many students have listened to his colorful classroom platter, the kids know Pete as the guy who taught them how to swim. In addition to his coaching, teaching and general promoting around Woollen Gym, he is in charge of the swimmers in the University's vast summer program for youngsters. The program's fame has reached a nation-wide audience now.

Since he was a shorty as a boy, Pete perfected long outside shots and his own brand of sparkling floor play. After starring for Charlotte's Central High School, he came to the University where he has remained. He is one of the Tar Heels' all-time greats. During his reign the squad never lost more than five games a year!

Players

Charlie Thorne Hugo Kappler

1950-51 Co-Captains

FORWARDS

14-Hugo Kappler, Sr., 21, 6-3, 185, Brooklyn, N. Y. The Co-Captain from Brooklyn has been picked on many pre-season All Southern teams and looked to be ready to make the forecasters' selections stand up, but again an injury stopped him. Last season, following a brilliant sophomore year which brought him well deserved All Southern Conference honors, he was hampered by a succession of injuries and illnesses. After averaging 17 points a game in early tilts, adding to his previous two year total of 441, he injured a wrist in the Hanes game. It is hoped that he will be ready for service in January, for the great forward has a variety of shots, unlimited energy and is a valuable team man.

5-Dick Patterson, Sr., 20, 6-2, 185, Pilot Mountain, N. C. After a brilliant high school and junior college career, Pat joined the varsity as a junior last winter. Nothing much was heard of him until Kappler left the lineup with one of his numerous injuries. Pat stepped in and was high scorer in several important games and ended the campaign with a respectable 174 points.

10-Darius Wells, Sr., 20, 6-2, 178, Roseboro, N. C. "Red" was an All County star who did not come out for the sport here. Coach Scott picked him up from a gym class team, and he has been a first rate reserve ever since. Majoring in physical education, he hopes to coach when his work is completed in June.

12-Hal Ferraro, Sr., 21, 6-0, 170, Arcadia, Kan. Used as a reserve last season, the Kansan is a favorite of the crowd. His tricky, amazingly accurate one handed jump shot wows the audience. It netted 47 points last winter. He is majoring in commerce.

30-Jack Wallace, Soph., 20, 6-4, 200, Elkins, W. Va. The good looking mountaineer earned a starting berth when Kappler was injured in early December and has done a remarkable job. He is a pre-med student and was a member of the West Virginia All Star team in 1947 and the State's All Tournament team the same year.

31-Tom Gaines, Soph., 19, 6-3, 195, Jamesville, N. C. The amateur photographer is developing rapidly and will see considerable service his initial campaign. Was a star in the East-West All Star game in 1949.

15-Bill Smith, Soph., 19, 6-0, 165, Bethel, N. C. Another sophomore with promise. Bill was a member of the All County and All Eastern team from Bethel High School. Plans a career as a C. P. A.

CENTERS

23-Bud Maddie, Soph., 22, 6-4, 210, Bronx, N. Y. A Navy veteran of two years, Maddie had prep school experience at Cardinal Hayes High School and played at Newport Naval Training Station in Rhode Island. Won a starting berth, but was injured in the third game of the season. Hopes to have wounded shoulder mended in time for Conference stretch.

24-Ernie Schwarz, Soph., 20, 6-4, 195, Philadelphia. Pa. Took over for Maddie at center when the latter was injured. Played well as a member of Jim Hamilton's frosh crew last winter. Has high school and prep school experience. He's fast and shifty.

32-Frank Redding, Jr., 20, 6-6, 200, Asheboro, N. C. "Smoke" barely missed getting his monogram as a sophomore a year ago. Will see reserve duty again. His first bucket of the year was scored before a hometown crowd as the Tar Heels topped McCrary's Eagles.

25-Jippy Carter, Soph., 19, 6-4, 185, Charlotte, N. C. Ineligible before final exams last quarter, he is expected to be of considerable help at the pivot post. He was an All State and All Southern star at Charlotte Central, and topped a fine high school career by taking high scoring honors in the State tourney.

GUARDS

3-Charlie Thorne, Jr., 23, 5-10, 162, Rocky Mount, N.C. The flashy half pint teams with Kappler as Co-Captain and is a natural leader. He's the playmaker of the Tar Heels. Doesn't shoot much, but is deadly from the outside. Missed a part of last season, but came back to do a fine job for Coach Scott. Followed his brother, Taylor, here and both will be remembered as Tar Heel greats.

21-Howard Deasy, Jr., 22, 6-6, 200, New York, N. Y. Quiet, easy going Deasy will give the Tar Heels both finesse and height at the guard position. With Thorne or Grimaldi on the other side, the squad has a fine Mutt and Jeff combo. He is fast and drives well. Scored 65 points as a sophomore, added a nifty 225 last season. Will jump at tip off. One of the best rebound men in the business.

4-Bill White, Sr., 21, 6-1, 175, Camp Hill, Pa. This steady player is closing out a good college career and will be in the lineup a good part of the time. Played well in the Dixie Classic last winter and led scorers for both clubs in the important West Virginia tilt. Scored 119 points as a junior after a sophomore total of only four.

13-Vince Grimaldi, Soph., 20, 6-0, 155, Philadelphia, Pa. The scrappy guard from Philly is a very clever ball player. He is fast and uses his hands well. He has a fine jump shot and should get some points his first varsity season. Considered one of the top young prospects on the squad, he will be a number one guard reserve.

33-Bob Phillips, Soph., 19, 6-0, 170, Chapel Hill, N. C. A hometown product, Bob has looked good in early season scraps and shows promise. He is the son of Dean Phillips of the School of Education, himself a court star of reput a number of years back.

34-Bill Ellington, Soph., 21, 6-4, 195, High Point, N. C. The recently married footballer has been a nice addition to the Tar Heels. He is big and strong and will get his chance as a reserve this season. Returned to his first love after a successful fling at freshman football.

11-Wayne Harpold, Soph., 21, 5-11, 180, Chester, W. Va. Not to be outdone by teammate Ellington, Wayne stepped out and was married not long ago also. Shows promise after a good start with the freshmen.

Freshman Prospects

"We're going to win a few and lose a few," is the way conservative Dan Nyimicz, new freshman basketball coach, summed up the prospects for the 1950-51 season.

Nyimicz, who is being helped by Simon Terrell this season, makes no bones about the fact that the Tar Heels can't compare with the fine squad of last season, yet he amends the statement by saying there is some interesting talent in the young crew.

For instance, at forward he has Skippy Winstead from Roxboro, brother of the Tar Heel tennis star, who has looked very good in early contests. Teaming with him is Buell Moser, an All Stater from Burlington with a good hook shot, and Eddie Mann, a scrappy star formerly with the Chapel Hill High School team.

The guards are manned with Charlotte's Paul Brantley and Garland Homes. Homes hails from Washington, N. C. A New Jersey lad, Webb Sherrill, will see much service as a guard also and is perhaps the best defensive player on the squad.

Roger Kingsbury, a lanky 6 foot, 5 inch center from the Nation's capital, seems to have that slot nailed down, but is getting a lot of competition from Jimmie Breedlove, a flashy shooter who burned up his league for Oxford High School a season ago.

Hal Bowden and Ernie Shore have also looked good at center, while there are several fine guards available. Among them are Chapel Hill's Fenno McGinty, Joe Mosier, George May, and Bryce Newman.

Nyimicz' group is well protected in the forward corner with such steadies as Sam Frazier, Smith Langdon and Bob Moye ready for action.

The Tar Heels have an attractive 19-game schedule and will play preliminary contests, starting at 6:15 P. M., before each home game of the varsity.

Freshman Coaches

DAN NYIMICZ, Head Coach—Dan was a great player here and was awarded the Foy Roberson Medal as the outstanding member of the Tar Heels two years ago. He has carried his court ability and ideals of sportsmanship into coaching. Last season he assisted Jim Hamilton in directing the winning freshman squad which sent such fine young players as Wallace, Grimaldi, Maddie and Schwarz to the varsity this season. Dan was also a fine golfer while a student and was a member of the Tar Heels' Southern Conference championship team of 1949. Now the pros consider him as one of the finest caddies in the business. Lloyd Mangum can testify to this, for Dan has helped this well known star several times in big tournaments and Mangum has been successful in most of them.

SIMON TERRELL, Assistant Coach—The veteran of World War II Merchant Marine duty has experience as a Tar Heel player also. He was a coach-on-the-court and a good student of the game. This is his first crack at coaching, but will continue after graduation.
